While there he asked a certain many to him to the saloon of the saloon of the hill for a while. it was thought might be that of Mich-ael Malone, who disappeared from his home in Greeneville on January 21. James M. Rogers, late a corporal in the 10th C. V., who lost an arm at Kinston, N. C., is in town as agent for tain man to obtain five men to work in with the installation of a new sprinkler system. For his scurrying around for help the sleek one said he would compensate him Saturday. After securing the necessary five, he informed them to report at mill No. 4 in the morning, which they promptly did at 7. After hanging around for their prospective employer for some time they upon investigation found that they had been sent on a fool's errand, as no one in the employ of the company knew about the allotted jobs. Much to the disappointment of the five willing workers, they were sent back. It seems that the would-be employer was a stranger the would-be employer was a stranger here and had no contract at all to pipe mill No. 4 with a new sprinkling syspicker room and was purely accidental.
